DETAILED ACTION

Response to Amendment

1. Applicant's amendment filed on June 08, 2007 has been entered. No claims have been amended. No claims have been cancelled. No claims have been added. Claims 1-18 are still pending in this application, with claims 1, 7, and 13 being independent.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action.

3. Claims 1-18 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Malik (US 6,324,269).

4. In regards to claims 1, 6, 7, 12, 13, and 18, Malik discloses a method and system for establishing a call from a first device (See Fig. 2 and calling party/subscriber office telephone 204a) to a second device (See Fig. 2 and called party's telephone 204b) comprising: receiving a call placed by a user (e.g., subscriber) from the first device; receiving from the first device information (i.e., the telephone number of the called party) regarding the second device; receiving from the first device information (e.g. special ALDB service access number, subscriber's home number, and password, [which are requested by SCN 56]) useful for associating the user with a third device (See Fig. 2 and home telephone 264c) (See col. 6 lines 55-66); transferring the call to a first switch

(See Fig. 2 and service switching point (SSP) 220c) associated with the third device; forwarding the call from the first switch to a second switch (See Fig. 2 and SSP 220b) using the information received from the first device, the second switch being associated with the second device; and completing the call from the second switch to the second device (See col. 1 lines 57-66 and col. 6 lines 35-54).

5. In regards to claims 2, 8, and 14, Malik discloses the method and system, wherein receiving from the first device information regarding the second device comprises: sending a prompt to the first device such that the first device provides the user with audible instructions; and receiving speech information from the user regarding the second device (See col. 2 lines 54-64, col. 3 lines 3-11, and col. 9 lines 26-34).

6. In regards to claims 3 and 15, Malik discloses the method and system, wherein receiving from the first device information regarding the second device comprises: receiving information from the user via speech regarding contact stored in a user's address book (i.e., destination list); and retrieving from the address book information specifying the second device using the contact information; wherein transferring the call from the first switch to the second switch includes using the record device information retrieved from the address book (See col. 2 lines 48-64 and col. 9 lines 35-58).

7. In regards to claims 4 and 16, Malik discloses the method and system, wherein receiving from the first device information regarding the second device comprises: receiving from the user a command to search an address book for a contact; receiving search criteria from the user; retrieving contact information from the address book using the search criteria; sending to the first device the retrieved contact information; receiving from the first device selection information specifying at least one contact; and wherein transferring the call from the first switch to the second switch, includes using information retrieved from the address book regarding the at least one specified contact (See col. 2 lines 48-64 and col. 9 lines 35-58).

8. In regards to claims 5, 11, and 17, Malik discloses the method and system, wherein receiving search criteria (e.g., the destination number) comprises receiving speech information from the user (See col. 2 lines 54-64, col. 3 lines 3-11, and col. 9 lines 26-34).

9. In regards to claims 9 and 10, Malik discloses the system, further comprising a storage device (i.e., SCP database) storing an address book (i.e., destination list) for the user; and a set of one or more processors for accessing the address book; wherein the set of processors for receiving information from the first device is capable of receiving speech information from the user regarding a contact stored in the user's address book and sending a query to the set of processors for accessing the address book regarding the received information; and wherein the set of processors for accessing the address book, in response to the query, are capable of retrieving from the address book information specifying the second device; and wherein the third switch transfers the call to the second switch using the second device information (See col. 2 lines 48-64 and col. 9 lines 35-58).

Response to Arguments

10. Applicant's arguments filed 06/08/07 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.
11. Applicant's argue that Malik does not disclose "receiving from the first device information useful for associating the user with a third device". Applicant's further state that nothing in Malik discloses any information "useful for associating the user with" home telephone 264c being received from the office telephone 204a.
12. In response to Applicants' argument that Malik does not disclose receiving from the first device information useful for associating the user with a third device and that nothing in Malik discloses any information useful for associating the user with home telephone 264c being received from the office telephone 204a, Examiner respectfully disagrees. Malik does disclose receiving from the first device (See Fig. 2 and calling party/subscriber office telephone 204a, via the touch tone keypad found on telephone 204a) information (e.g. special ALDB service access number, subscriber's home number, and password, [which are requested by SCN 56]) useful for associating the user (e.g., subscriber) with a third device (See Fig. 2 and home telephone 264c) (See col. 6 lines 35-66). Therefore, the special ALDB service access number, subscriber's home number, and password are information useful for associating the user (e.g., subscriber) with home telephone 264c being received from the office telephone 204a (via the touch tone keypad found on telephone 204a).

Conclusion
